One block sections of Marvin and Hancock, between Ninth and Tenth, are blocked off to traffic while workmen install large sections of drainage pipe in seven-foot deep ditches. The large, corrugated pipes are being installed in an attempt to alleviate the heavy flooding that occurs in that area following heavy rains. The work shown above is in the alley between Ninth and Tenth Streets.

Prosecutor alleges Mitchell, Stans lied

NEW YORK (AP) — Chief prosecutor John Wing told a jury today that former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and ex-Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans lied to cover up an illegal attempt to influence a government investigation.

"I submit to you that the evidence in this case has shown that Mitchell and Stans lied to the grand jury and that they lied to you," Wing said in the windup of a 6½-hour, two-day summation at their criminal conspiracy trial.

"I ask you to consider if there was nothing wrong, if there was no illegal attempt to cover up a contribution, why did they lie?" he asked.

The jury of nine men and three women was expected to get the case in the afternoon after instructions on relevant law by U.S. District Court Judge Lee P. Gagliardi.

Mitchell and Stans are accused of perjury and of conspiring to obstruct justice for allegedly attempting to impede a Securities and Exchange Commission fraud investigation of financier Robert L. Vesco in return for his secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

The defendants quit the cabinet to run Nixon's 1972 campaign.

Vesco, a 38-year-old multimillionaire, was indicted with them but fled the country rather than face trial.

Wing's summation was interrupted frequently by objections from defense lawyers and motions for a mistrial, which Gagliardi denied.

Wing went through each of the six perjury counts against each defendant and told the jury what evidence was presented to prove they were lying.

Mitchell's lawyer, Peter Fleming Jr., whose own lengthy summation preceded the government's, characterized the case against the former cabinet members as "a prosecutorial vision — a vision that they set out to give life to."

"They have failed," Fleming said, declaring that the government case was "a ball of wax. John Mitchell is either a corrupt fixer and liar, or he is neither." And Fleming said he was neither and that the government had built its case on conjecture, suspicion and innuendo.

Add credit amendment

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — An amendment attached to a Senate-passed bill by the Missouri House today would prohibit the denial of credit based on sex or marital status.

The amendment, offered by Rep. Sue Shear, D-Brentwood, is identical to a bill previously passed by the House but unlikely to be approved by the Senate.

The amendment is to a bill which would redefine a retail seller under the law. It is aimed, it's House sponsor said, at legalizing credit sales through persons who are leasing businesses and allowing charges to be assessed to a credit card not issued by them, such as service stations.

The bill will now be returned to the Senate for consideration of House changes.

Wednesday the Senate Mental Health Committee told the state mental health director to furnish budget figures today to justify his assertion that appropriations cuts will force him to dismiss hundreds of employees.

Director Harold P. Robb had criticized the Senate's cut of $6.8 million from the House figure in his fiscal 1974-75 budget.

While the appropriation to the division is $95.8 million, $3.4 million more than the current year's budget, Robb said it's not enough to continue operations at the current level.

He said about 600 of the 10,000 employees of the division might lose their jobs and patient placement in small communities will be halted.

Report on charges

Nixon tape response deadline is extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee today extended the deadline for President Nixon to respond to a subpoena for tapes of 42 presidential conversations and received a recommendation that a number of impeachment charges against Nixon be dropped.

Both developments had been expected. The committee voted 34 to 4 to extend until next Tuesday the deadline for Nixon to respond to the subpoena, which originally called for compliance by today.

The committee's staff, meanwhile, recommended that a number of impeachment charges should be dropped and said the committee should concentrate on Watergate, Nixon's taxes and contributions to his re-election campaign.

The report, if accepted, would be the basis for the presentation of evidence to the committee, which is scheduled to begin May 7.

Committee Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., had assured the White House on Tuesday that its request for an additional five days to respond to the subpoena would be granted.

Rodino said the committee was acting "with tremendous restraint" because it wanted to give every assurance to the American people that the investigation was being conducted fairly and completely.

He said the extension expressed the desire of the committee and the American people that Nixon respond fully to the committee request so the investigation could be brought to a conclusion.

Some members expressed skepticism, however, that Nixon would turn over all of the material requested.

"I think it's safe to say," said Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., "that after five more days we still will not get a satisfactory response. We'll get transcripts or we'll be told there are no tapes or there are erasures or that Nixon wants to provide his own view of the evidence."

Another member who voted against the extension, Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., said "we've leaned over so far backward I'm afraid some of us have fallen over."

The other two votes against the extension were cast by Reps. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., and Robert Drinan, D-Mass.

A number of Democrats who supported the delay said they did so reluctantly and with the expectation that it would mean complete compliance with the request by Nixon.

At their meeting Wednesday, committee Republicans proposed that a screening procedure be adopted that will assure committee participation in any editing of the tapes.

Most of the charges that would be dropped under the recommendation relate to allegations of White House use of executive agencies for political purposes.

Also to be laid aside under the staff's recommendation were charges relating to the impoundment of funds appropriated by Congress, the dismantling of the Office of Economic Opportunity, and, conditionally, the secret bombing of Cambodia.

A final decision on the bombing charges is to be made after release of a Senate Armed Services Committee hearing record on the issue.

Rebellion in Portugal is termed 'confused'

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Armed troops seized radio and television stations in Lisbon early today and claimed to have won power from the regime of Premier Marcello Caetano.

But an official at the Foreign Ministry said, "It is not true that the government has surrendered. There is an attempt to take over the government and the situation is confused."

A 12-minute round of machine-gun fire was heard in the neighborhood of the Plaza de Comercio, Lisbon's main square, around noon. Diplomatic dispatches reaching London said tanks of Portugal's 7th Cavalry Regiment were deployed there, and that some civilians were wounded.

The regiment was one which evidently had not joined the rebels. There was no indication available immediately as to who fired first or how an apparent confrontation began.

According to diplomatic dispatches reaching London, the rebels, styling themselves "The National Junta of Salvation," pledged to work for the restoration of civil and democratic rights in Portugal, work for peace in Portugal's African territories and run the country transitionally pending national elections for a constitution-writing assembly.

They said the junta had seven members, but did not immediately identify them.

The rebels spoke of the failure of the Portuguese system after 13 years to formulate an overseas policy that would produce peace between Portuguese "of all races and creeds."

Their proclamation also spoke of the need "to clean up" Portugal's institutions, to eliminate what it called "the illegal acts which the abuse of power has legalized."

The proclamation also was said to have declared that the movement of the armed forces would "complete a program of salvation" for Portugal and would restore to the nation the civil liberties it had lost.

The junta said it would exercise power of government only temporarily — until there could be nationwide elections for an assembly that would be charged with writing a new constitution.

Jones says Fair needs to compete for attention

Stressing the need for increased public awareness "of what the Missouri State Fair is all about," Fair Secretary Ron Jones met Wednesday with the Chamber of Commerce board of directors to discuss the Chamber's role in promoting the annual August event.

Attending the meeting with Jones was Mike Brown, an executive with the Kansas City advertising firm of Christenson, Barclay and Shaw Inc. The firm has the public relations contract for the 1974 Fair.

"From the public standpoint, the Fair needs a few friends," Jones said. "At the time the Fair opened here at the turn of the century, we were still primarily a rural-oriented state. The agriculture emphasis of the Fair was understood by most of the people. However, in the last 20 years or so, the balance of power in the state legislature has shifted from rural to urban. The urban legislators are naturally more concerned about the situations affecting their constituents most. In my contacts with them, I get the idea they aren't as interested in the Fair as they could be. They still think of it in terms of carnivals and cattle."

The Fair, Jones emphasized, "has always been agriculturally-oriented and it goes without saying that we'll continue to be so. However, we've got a lot more to offer now and we just have to let more people know about it."

Competition has increased the need for advertising the Fair, said Jones.

"We have to face the fact that there is more and more competition for the recreational dollars of Missourians," he said. "There is now Silver Dollar City in the Ozarks, Six Flags Over Mid-America in St. Louis and World's of Fun in Kansas City. There's also pro football games and baseball. We're going to have to compete for the attention of the people more than ever before."

His efforts in this area, Jones indicated, have been hampered by an advertising budget cut of $25,000 since 1972. "In that year," he explained, "the Fair was appropriated $100,000 to spend on advertising. This figure was cut to $67,000 in 1973 but we managed to get it upped somewhat to $75,000 this year."

This factor, Jones told the Chamber directors, increased the importance of volunteer promotional assistance.

One way the Chamber could help, he suggested, would be for Chamber members

Fair performers named

Johnny Cash, Charlie Pride and Doc Severinsen will be three of the headliners for the Missouri State Fair Aug. 16-25.

Although the announcement was not formal, Fair Secretary Ron Jones inadvertently disclosed the information when he presented to the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce board of directors Wednesday a sample of the new stationary designed to promote the Fair this year.

At the top of the stationary are drawings of Cash, Pride and Severinsen. The printing on the stationary, which reads "The Great Missouri Get-Together," is an old-fashioned type, modeled after a wooden type face over 100 years old.

Jones later listed for The Democrat-Capital the other scheduled entertainers.

Doc Severinsen, with his Now

Generation Brass and Today's Children, will be featured on the first Sunday night of the Fair, Aug. 18.

Johnny Cash will appear with his wife, June Carter Cash, on Tuesday, Aug. 20.

Wednesday, Aug. 21, will be Gospel Music Night at the Fair, with various gospel singing groups appearing.

Although no formal contract has been signed, Jones said, a verbal agreement has been reached with Buck Owens to perform Thursday, Aug. 22. Barbara Fairchild will appear with Owens.

Charlie Pride and Ronnie Milsap are scheduled to entertain on Saturday, Aug. 24, and Kenny Rodgers and the First Edition will close the Fair with a show Sunday, Aug. 25.

Hearst girl denies brainwashing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — And now this from Patricia Hearst: my parents are "pigs," my fiancé a "clown." And "I am a soldier of the people's army" who voluntarily robbed a bank.

Speaking in a calm, subdued voice in a taped message received Wednesday, Miss Hearst said "Greetings ... This is Tania." She then proceeded to heap scorn and ridicule on her family, said she never cared if she saw her "sexist pig" fiancé again, and added:

"To those people who still believe that I'm brainwashed or dead, I see no reason to further defend my position. I am a soldier of the people's army."

"The only way we can free ourselves of this fascist dictatorship is by fighting — not with words but with guns."

In the tape, the 20-year-old college coed called her parents "the pig Hearsts," and at one point addressed her father as "Adolf," an apparent reference to Nazi leader Adolf Hitler. She termed Steven

Weed, to whom she became engaged last December and planned to marry in June, "my ex-fiance."

Her father, San Francisco Examiner editor and president Randolph A. Hearst, confirmed the voice was his daughter's, and added:

"The only good thing is that she is alive. Regarding her personal attacks on me, if she has been brainwashed, and I firmly believe she has, then it's not surprising she would say something like this."

"No matter what she says, we still love her. The girl we've known all her life would not say something like that of her own free will."

Miss Hearst, whom the Symbionese Liberation Army claims to have kidnapped on Feb. 4, said in the tape she was a voluntary participant in an April 15 bank robbery in which four alleged members of the SLA have been named in warrants. She is wanted as a material witness. Of that robbery, which she called "a revolutionary act," she said:

"I was positioned so that I could hold customers and bank personnel who were on the floor. My gun was loaded and at no time did any of my comrades intentionally point their guns at me."

Pictures taken of the $10,600 robbery at the Hibernia Bank in San Francisco showed two of the armed participants with guns pointed in the direction of Miss Hearst, who was standing in the middle of the bank, a rifle around her shoulder, her hand in her pocket.

In the tape, Miss Hearst dismissed suggestions that she come forward for a personal interview as proof she is not being coerced.

"To the clowns who want a personal interview with me — Vincent Hallinan (an attorney), Steven Weed and the pig Hearsts," she said, "It's absurd to think

Final site contract decider on hospital

American Institutional Development Co. of St. Louis will announce either Friday or Saturday where it will build a private hospital in Sedalia, company president Sigmund Oxenhandler said Thursday.

The announcement will be made, Oxenhandler said, after the company enters into final contract to purchase a site for the new hospital, to be known as the Sedalia Medical Center.

Oxenhandler has been in Sedalia this week negotiating the land purchase.

The company earlier this month exercised an option to purchase one of two sites previously selected for the proposed 150-bed, $3.5 million facility. One of the sites is at 32nd and Washington and the other behind the Ramada Inn between Highway 50 and 16th Street.

If the contract is completed, Oxenhandler said, construction will begin about late August.

Oxenhandler also said he has met this week with "all but one or two" of the approximately 15 local doctors who previously said they would serve on the staff of the new hospital.

The meetings, Oxenhandler said, were to discuss equipment purchases for the hospital.

Earlier this month it was reported that many of the doctors who originally indicated in writing they would serve on the new hospital's staff had changed their minds.

But Oxenhandler reiterated Thursday that he still has not been notified by any of the doctors that they would withdraw from the staff.

The fact that all but one or two of the original group met with Oxenhandler this week shows continuing support for the medical facility, he said. Oxenhandler added that it would have been "pointless" for him to have asked the doctors whether they had changed their minds.

Oxenhandler earlier had said that he would not have gone ahead with his plans had he not had the local support of doctors.

"I'm going to invest $4 million," Oxenhandler said. "I'm not going to put up that kind of money without their support."

The completion date of the hospital has been set at 14 months after construction starts.

Hawaii moves to eliminate gas

By LEONARD LUERAS
HONOLULU — "Instead of a tiger, we have a chicken in our tank."

With that sendoff from its developer, a large sedan powered by a combination of refined chicken manure, pig manure and shredded palm fronds began a historic journey around a campus fountain at the University of Hawaii.

The automobile, which runs on methane gas made from local organic waste, leaves nothing in its wake except nonpolluting water vapor.

Now, for the first time, methane automobile fuel is going to be commercially produced and distributed by Encotech, a Hawaii-based "energy conversion" corporation funded by a group of local investors.

While Encotech's aim is to turn waste into profit, it has received a great deal of research and development aid from scientists at the University of Hawaii who believe in the long-range environmental benefits of nonpolluting fuel.

In return, Encotech has donated a grant of $19,500 to the University for further study of an organic waste recycling system. Moreover, it has committed in perpetuity a portion of all pretax Encotech profits to sustain research by the University to create other recycled waste products.

At the demonstration, Dr. James H. Koshi, of the University's animal sciences department, and John van Geldern, Encotech's project manager, announced that, if fully implemented, their garbage-to-fuel scheme could eliminate all the sewage being generated by the 678,124 residents of Honolulu within five years.

When the nonpolluting methane gas is in commercial production later this year, it will be sold to drivers at a pump cost of 36 cents per gallon — a little more than half the going price of regular oil-based gasoline.

Along with the price difference, van Geldern claims that methane gas will increase a car's miles-per-gallon performance by about 15 to 30 per cent.

In other words, if your car is now getting 10 miles per gallon of regular gasoline, you should get about 12.5 miles per gallon methane gas at 60 per cent of the cost per gallon.

"But the most important thing," van Geldern said, "is it's clean. There's nothing left. Just water vapor."

Koshi and van Geldern explained that "when methane is commercially produced and filtered, it becomes an odorless, colorless, clean-burning 100 octane fuel which produces absolutely no harmful smog-creating exhaust emissions."

"Among the fuel's plus factors," they said "is its low cost and its lack of gums, tars, varnishes or carbon deposits on engines."

"Engines can go further between oil changes, and some cars have been known to operate over 150,000 miles without the need for a ring or valve job."

In the demonstration at the University of Hawaii, fuel came from an air tank located in the trunk just behind the spare tire. The tank was about four feet long and 12 inches in diameter, with a capacity of about 12 gallons under pressure.

"By using dry-vapor fuel like this, you get mileage-plus because dry vapor is totally burned," van Geldern said, adding that "you lose about 30 per cent of wet fuel" via evaporation.

He explained further that besides the air tank, the only conversions required on a normal car are the installation of a two-state regulator which reduces air pressure, and air filter and a fuel cutoff device for the regular gas tank lines.

The cost of converting an ordinary gasoline-combustion car to a methane gas system, he said, would be between $180 and $200 per vehicle.

However, Encotech is planning to convert combustion systems free of charge and allow the vehicle owner to pay for the conversion over several years as a small part of the overall methane fuel costs.

Van Geldern said that the methane system is better than a normal gasoline system because "government rated" air tanks used to store methane are 10 times safer than normal gasoline tanks.

"You can't puncture them as easily, they take more heat, and methane-vapor fuel has a much higher flash point than regular gasoline," he said.

Encotech is presently studying 10 sites on the island of Oahu and hopes to break ground on the first of 10 waste-digesting plants by June.

"We should be in operation by August, and by the end of the year we should be producing about 80,000 gallons of methane gas a week," van Geldern said.

If all goes according to plan, Encotech should be up to 800,000 gallons a week by the end of next year.

Apparently, the company's economic prospect is as attractive as its ecological promise. A group of Hawaiian businessmen has invested $3.5 million in the privately held corporation. The methane producing plants should cost around $400,000 each. And company spokesmen feel certain they will begin paying for themselves immediately.

"What it will mean in terms of the individual is less costly and more abundant fuel from a source that cannot be depleted — and a cleaner environment in which to live," said van Geldern. (NEA)

Communications with parole board 'lacking'

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — "Federal judges often wonder if the parole board even cares what we think when we impose a sentence on a defendant," says Judge Albert C. Wollenberg of San Francisco.

He spoke Wednesday in the concluding session of a sentencing institute for more than 80 judges from the 8th and 10th federal judicial circuits. Judge Wollenberg said communication between the sentencing judge and the parole board is necessary, but lacking.

His remarks came on the heels of a talk by Maurice Sigler, chairman of the U.S. Parole Board, who acknowledged the federal parole board is behind state parole boards in execution of its functions. He blamed it on lack of manpower. "Few judges think we're handling it right, so we must be doing it wrong," he said.

He urged the judges to advise the board how much time they feel a defendant should serve when they impose an indeterminate sentence.

An indeterminate sentence states a defendant may be released any time after sentencing at the discretion of the parole board, Judge Wesley Brown of Kansas said. "I don't know how we can state it any more clearly," he said.

Sigler said indeterminate sentences run longer than specified sentences because the parole board does not know how long the judge wants the person in prison.

Fall from camper is fatal for youth

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A 5-year-old boy from Buckner, Mo., has died at a hospital here of head injuries suffered when he fell from his family's camper north of Sedalia.

The highway patrol said the victim, Patrick R. Jones, tumbled from the camper when the rear door swung open as the truck turned onto the west-bound Interstate 70 exit ramp from U.S. 65.

Patrick, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Jones, and two of his brothers were returning from a weekend trip to Stover, Mo.

Shysters are crippling the legitimate charities

By TOM TIEDE

NEW YORK — Part of the incidental information culled from the investigation of President Nixon's tax returns was that in 1972 he contributed a mere $292 to charity.

The niggardly gift was surprising to much of the nation, but not really a subject of controversy because of a general belief that charities are old fashioned, that philanthropy is fading and that donations in general are down.

Not so. According to statistics just compiled, charities are enjoying unprecedented favor in America, and the President, in 1972, simply was not doing his share. The American Association of Fund Raising Council reports that some 27-million tax returns indicated charitable deductions last year, and some half-million charities shared in a record-breaking receipt of $24.5 billion.

The figures are staggering and, to a nation plagued by enough problems of inhumanity and carelessness, they are encouraging. Religious groups and institutions received $10.9 billion alone. One contributor, Mrs. Geraldine Rockefeller Lodge, gave $85 million to set up a foundation in her name, and another philanthropist, Mrs. Helen Bonfils, donated $50 million to the performing arts.

The Fund Raising Council says that individual Americans contributed more than $18 billion of the total for an average contribution of $490 apiece.

But beneath this good news, there are some signs that the President may not be so out of trend as it seems. Perhaps he is merely ahead of his time. Despite large sums being given to charity at present, there is worry it may not continue.

Already Americans are giving less of their total income to needy causes (1.75 per cent today vs. 1.78 in 1960) and some experts in the field, such as Melvin Van de Werken of the National Information Bureau, believe young people, tomorrow's givers, "are being turned off by charity."

The reason for the concern is simple: Many charities operate fund-raising campaigns that raise more money for the fund raisers than the charity. And it's not only young people who are disturbed by such questionable procedures, it's everybody who's aware of what sometimes goes on. Says Jack Schwartz, whose 42-year-old Fund Raising Council is a collection of 30 major, and presumably legitimate, firms:

"We fight this image all the time. Everytime some fly-by-night shyster clips the public, legitimate fund raisers are hurt. People get suspicious and it's harder to get them to give."

To be sure, there are numerous fly-by-night shysters. One Washington, D.C., fund raiser recently forced charity organizers to sign a contract which allowed him to take his expenses and profit before any donations could go to the needy.

Another group, called the Friends of the FBI, is reported to have used such devious tactics in money raising that the most popular G-Man of them all, TV's Ephrem Zimbalist, Jr., withdrew his name from its list of alleged supporters.

But breaking or bending legalities is not the most prevalent of fund-raising abuses. In most cases the perversion is mostly an ethical one: Fund raisers milk high but lawful profits from ostensibly worthy causes.

In one classic example uncovered by Sen. Walter Mondale's Senate Subcommittee on Children and Youth, investigators found that fund raisers for a group called Asthmatic Children's Foundation raised $10 million to help the diseased kids, then pocketed 86 per cent of the total as campaign expenses.

Naturally, this latter abuse will no doubt hinder future collections for asthmatic youngsters. Thus the concern that shady or incompetent fund raisers will eventually cripple charity in general. Schwartz of the Fund Raising Council says that newspapers should do more to protect the legitimate enterprises, by emphasizing the positive rather than the negative side of charity campaigns.

He says the unworthies are "an extremely small percentage" of the total. He adds that the major fund-raising firms will not even consider a charity campaign if the cost gets much above 25-30 per cent.

Yet as of now, very little is known about the extent of fund-raising abuse. The true crooks may be, as Schwartz says, "an extremely small percentage" of the overall, but then again the NIB, which acts as a fact-finding agency for philanthropers, annually finds that some 75 of the nation's largest and most entrenched charities operate to some degree of inefficiency or exaggeration.

Some states and cities do regulate charities, and demand such information as financial breakdowns, but for the most part, this data, nationally, is privileged. Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Calif.) reports that he recently tried to check into the operations of several charities and found they refused to answer any questions.

The National Chamber of Commerce and the Better Business Bureau also have had difficulties getting charities to reveal the economics of their operations. In some cases, the charities refuse for reason of "privacy," and many well-known religious charities say they maintain secrecy on the sacred tenet of church and state separation.

Not surprisingly, attempts are being made to change this secrecy. Van Deerlin has introduced a House bill which would force charities which solicit by mail to disclose the facts of their money disbursement. Mondale is leaning toward the creation of some kind of federal information center whereby any citizen can check on the worthiness of his prospective charity and the use of his donated dollar.

Less specific, but apparently equally concerned, the Nixon administration has set up a commission to "study the situation."

But in lieu of new laws or restrictions, legitimate fund raisers and charity workers say the abuses can even now be minimized if individuals and corporations follow two simple and logical rules:

(1) Never give money to unidentified people and (2), Never give money to a charity that will not reveal how its donations are spent. "Charity shall cover the multitude of sins," says Revelations 4:8; and in this day and age, that includes naivete. (NEA)

Donald Wayne Napier, 116½ East Main, died Thursday morning at his home.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete. The body is at the Ewing Funeral Home.

Thomas Gerald Gwartney

Funeral services for Thomas Gerald Gwartney, 21, 309 East Second, who was killed in a one-car accident west of Sedalia Monday night, will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the McLaughlin Funeral Home with the Rev. William Savage officiating.

Burial will be in Crown Hill Cemetery.

Hearst

that I could surface to say what I'm saying now and be allowed to freely return to my comrades. The enemy still wants me dead."

The tape, which also included the voices of two men, was Miss Hearst's first communication since she renounced her family on April 3 and said she was joining the SLA as an armed comrade. She also said she had taken the name "Tania," in memory of a slain girl friend of Latin American guerrilla Che Guevara.

Police Community Relations Director Rodney Williams, who obtained the tape through an intermediary, turned it over to the FBI. He said the tape was in a brown paper package along with half of Miss Hearst's driver's license and a red poster showing hands and a clenched fist. The other half of Miss Hearst's license was used to authenticate a previous SLA communication.

Speaking of Weed on the tape, Miss Hearst said:

"As for my ex-fiance, I'm amazed that he thinks that the first thing I would want to do once freed would be to rush and see him. The fact is, I don't care if I ever see him again."

Explaining the alleged reason for the bank robbery, she said the holdup "forced the corporate state to help finance the revolution ... As with the money involved in my parents' bad faith gesture to aid the people these funds are being used to aid the people and to insure the survival of the people's forces in their struggle with and for the people."

She said she was alive and well. "As for being brainwashed, the idea is ridiculous to the point of being beyond belief."

Shortly before police received the tape, the FBI announced that two rented getaway cars used in the bank robbery had been located in a basement parking garage. The FBI said the vehicles, which turned up in a routine check, apparently had been left there within a few hours of the April 15 holdup.

Two young women reportedly were called to testify today before a federal grand jury probing the robbery. The Examiner identified them as Janet Cooper Weiss and Cynthia Garvey, both of Oakland, and said they were acquainted with persons who later joined the SLA, a group which authorities say is multiracial, heavily armed and believed to consist of about 25 male and female persons.

Federal authorities had no immediate comment on the tape.

Death penalty bill returned to House

JEDFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A death penalty bill its Senate sponsor said "steered the middle course," emerged from the Senate Wednesday and was returned to the House, where it faces strong opposition.

The approval, 27-5, came after four days of debate and after opponents of the death penalty failed in attempts to amend it to require public television of executions and to require that they be by hanging and on the courthouse lawn.

Sen. Lawrence Lee, D-St. Louis, offered the television amendment, saying, "If it is going to be a deterrent to crime, this will help it."

Sen. Maurice Schechter, D-Creve Coeur, offered the hanging amendment.

Removed from the bill were provisions saying a person shall serve at least 20 years without parole if the death penalty is declared unconstitutional. Senators said the provision in the current law, allowing judges to determine parole and the governor to grant commutations of sentences any time, should be retained.

A so-called "severability" clause, which keeps the rest of the bill constitutional if the capital punishment section is declared unconstitutional was left in by one vote. Left in also, by a three vote margin was a section saying the jury can be instructed on finding a lesser crime.

Lee contended this was unconstitutional because it gave the jury a choice. Sen. Frank Bild, R-St. Louis County, who battled for a more comprehensive bill, argued that the U.S. Supreme Court outlawed the death penalty in cases where the jury had a choice in assessing punishment, and thereby discriminate in their decisions.

Bild said judges can still give instructions on lesser offenses, but if the jury finds a capital murder has been committed, it must give death.

Death would be assessed for murder during rape or kidnap, murder for hire or paying someone to murder, murder of a policeman on duty and murder by a person serving a prison sentence.

Missouri has a sweeping death penalty law but no one has been executed since 1965. The new bill changes to life in prison the current punishment of death for anyone selling a dangerous drug such as heroin to a minor.

Some senators criticized the bill as too strong and others said it was too weak.

Sen. Ike Skelton, D-Lexington, sponsor of the amendment on the capital punishment section, said "It should be applied only on rare occasions for the most heinous crimes. It steers a moderate, middle course."

Sen. Donald Galike, D-Lemay, pointed out that premediated first degree murder outside the specific categories should not result in death, saying the bill has a loophole "big enough to drive a truck through."

The House sponsors of the death penalty reinstatement say the House will not accept the Senate bill. A conference committee bill is expected to be weaker than the House bill, which adds death for assassination of state or federal officials, murder during a hijacking, murder during a robbery or burglary, murder of a trial witness and murder of a fireman, as well as policemen.

Nixon said ready to veto oil price rollback

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With oil profits continuing to soar, President Nixon reportedly has pledged to veto emergency energy legislation if it contains an oil price rollback.

Rep. James F. Hastings, R-N.Y., said Wednesday he had been told by "people at the White House" that the President would not accept an amendment approved by the House Commerce Committee.

That amendment would roll back domestic crude oil to the prices that existed in November 1973, at the beginning of the Arab oil embargo. This would lower the cost of most oil from the current $5.25 a barrel to $4.25, and would lower the retail cost of gasoline and other petroleum products.

Nixon vetoed previous emergency energy legislation because of a similar price rollback provision.

Profits of major oil companies, meanwhile, continue to show sharp increases for the first three months of 1974. Continental Oil (Conoco) reported Wednesday that net income after taxes for the first quarter rose 130 per cent to $109.2 million, or $2.16 a share, compared to $47.5 million in the same period of 1973.

Getty Oil reported a 122 per cent increase in its first quarter profits, with after-tax earnings reaching $73.6 million. They were $33.1 million a year ago. And Murphy Oil Corp. of El Dorado, Ark., a smaller firm, disclosed quarterly profits of $27.37 million, up 257 per cent from the year-earlier level of $7.67 million.

Earlier this week, Exxon, Texaco, Gulf, Standard of Indiana (Amoco) and Occidental reported first quarter profits up from 75 per cent to 718 per cent over 1973 levels.

"The exceptionally favorable results in the first quarter of this year are not indicative of the earnings gains anticipated for the full year of 1974," said Conoco chairman John McClean.

S. B. Pinyan, Atlanta representative of the Phillips Petroleum Co., said Wednesday it is a "phony charge" to say oil companies are making windfall profits. Large oil companies are reporting dramatic profit increases because current earnings are being compared to 1973 when, he said, industry profits were the lowest in a decade.

There were these other developments:

—A nationwide Associated Press survey shows that Americans are abandoning the conservation habits they voluntarily adopted during last winter's energy crisis. The survey showed automobile traffic approaching pre-embargo levels. And it showed that mass transit use is up, toll road receipts are climbing and electricity conservation rates are declining.

—A check of data from the American Petroleum Institute and several major oil companies showed that a Mobil Oil Corp. advertisement claiming that only one in 60 wells drilled pays off is less than fully accurate. API figures show that of all new wells drilled worldwide last year, 61.2 per cent struck oil or natural gas, 36 times better than the Mobil ad says. A Mobil spokesman said the one-in-60 figure applies "only for wildcat drilling in the United States in brand new fields where there are no proven oil or gas reserves."

Police to begin issuing tickets for one-way signs

Police will begin issuing tickets to motorists who violate the one-way signs around the post office, Police Chief William Miller said Thursday.

The one-way signs were erected about two weeks ago in an effort to ease the traffic congestion around the post office.

"The signs have been up for a couple of weeks now and we've issued quite a few warnings," Miller said. "A few people are still going the wrong way, but we feel that it's been a long enough period of time for motorists to have become accustomed to the change."

The one-way system is on a 90-day trial basis but will become permanent if the plan eases traffic congestion around the post office.

Two incidents of vandalism were reported to police Tuesday.

Mrs. Leon Hall, 1805 East Sixth, reported that her car was damaged by a rock thrown from the railroad overpass at the 300 block of East Broadway as she was driving west on Broadway Tuesday.

According to police, the rock broke the rear window of Mrs. Hall's car, causing an estimated $75 damage.

Tom B. Hulse, 403 West Fifth, told police that vandals damaged his car while it was parked on the parking lot at 114 East Third, around midnight Tuesday.

The front windshield, valued at $125, and body side molding, valued at $25, were damaged.

Israel independence day marked with continued fighting

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel somberly observed 26 years of independence today with the guns of October still firing on the Syrian front.

"This year we are remembering 2,500 dead in the Yom Kippur War," said Yehuda Ilan, the government's chief organizer of independence activities. "The hurt is still too acute and the celebrations are more introverted."

Syrian and Israeli forces battled all night on Mt. Hermon then locked in tank and artillery duels "on all other sectors" of the 40-mile front, the Syrian command reported. It was the 45th day of action.

The Syrian communique gave no details of fighting on the 9,200-foot high mountain overlooking the Golan Heights. But reports in the Beirut press said its highest peak has changed hands several times in the last 10 days. According to these accounts, neither side now controls the peak but each has its own flag planted on opposite slopes.

Premier Golda Meir, in her first television interview since she resigned two weeks ago, said she does not expect to live to see real peace between Israel and the Arabs.

"One of my faults is that I cannot deceive myself, and I do not see peace around the corner," said Mrs. Meir, who will be 76 next week.

U.S., West Germany sign agreement on troop costs there

BONN, Germany (AP) — The United States and West Germany signed a long-delayed agreement today under which Washington will receive $2.22 billion to offset foreign exchange costs of stationing 200,000 U.S. troops in this country.

The agreement, replacing a previous two-year arrangement which expired June 30, 1973, was signed by U.S. Ambassador Martin J. Hillenbrand and Peter Hermes, a senior official in the Bonn Foreign Ministry.

A joint statement said the agreement, covering the period from July 1, 1973 to June 30, 1975, involves a total West German payment of 5.92 billion marks, or $2.22 billion at a conversion rate of 2.669 marks to the dollar.

"The agreement is based on the strength of the U.S. forces in the Federal Republic of Germany as of 1 July, 1973," the statement said, indicating that U.S. troops in West Germany will remain at their present 200,000 level for duration of the agreement.

Spring musical to open tonight

The setting, San Francisco's China Town. The action, a love triangle complicated by an Oriental generation gap.

That's the basic background for the Smith-Cotton High School Parent-Teacher-Student Association's annual spring musical, "Flower Drum Song," by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein.

The production opens at 8 o'clock tonight at the Smith-Cotton auditorium and will run through Saturday.

This favorite Rodgers and Hammerstein work features several numbers regarded as hallmarks of the American musical theater, such as "I Enjoy Being A Girl," "You Are Beautiful" and "Chop Suey."

Nixon returns to Mississippi for address

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — President Nixon returned today to this state where, a year ago, he adopted a phrase now associated with his determination in the face of mounting adversity: "Tough it out."

Accompanied by Mississippi's two Democratic senators and a bipartisan congressional delegation, the President and Mrs. Nixon got an airport welcome from Democratic Gov. William Waller prior to speaking to the Mississippi Economic Council.

The presidential jet taxied to a remote corner of Allen C. Thompson Airport where only military and security personnel were on hand. A crowd of several hundred were kept behind a fence many hundreds of yards away.

Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., a member of the House Judiciary Committee that is considering Nixon's impeachment, had planned to accompany the President on the flight from Washington. However, Lott's office said this morning the pressure of business would keep him in the capital.

Last April 27, Nixon flew to Meridian, Miss., to pay tribute to Democratic Sen. John C. Stennis, who in introducing Nixon urged that the President "tough it out" in the face of the unfolding Watergate scandal.

Nixon, in his own speech, applauded Mississippians for having "the ability and the will and the desire to tough it out."

The 1973 trip to Mississippi marked the last of many flights aboard Air Force One for presidential aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman. They were forced to resign three days later.

The White House said Nixon was invited last July to appear before the economic council, a statewide chamber of commerce group, in a Jackson coliseum holding up to 10,000 spectators.

Nixon agreed to appear at the urging of Stennis and Democratic Sen. James O. Eastland, according to the White House.

As part of Nixon's courtship of Southern conservatives, coinciding with his drive to avoid impeachment, the President last month had Stennis and Eastland join him for a private breakfast at the White House.

Mississippi gave Nixon 79 per cent of its votes in the 1972 election, more than any other state. Ironically, Nixon's share of Mississippi's votes four years earlier — 13½ per cent — was smaller than in any other state.

The dramatic shift in his electoral fortunes reflected the fact that Gov. George C. Wallace of neighboring Alabama was on the 1968 ballot but did not appear in 1972.

Drinking is linked to injury accident

Two Marshall women were injured Wednesday night and a Stover man was charged with driving while intoxicated in connection with a two-car collision on north Highway 65 near Route H.

According to the Highway Patrol, Lowell G. Swearngin, 46, was driving north in the southbound lane on Highway 65 and had no headlights on at the time of the accident.

Swearngin's 1965 Dodge collided with a 1969 Ford driven by Mrs. Ruth Kraus, 31, the Patrol said. A passenger in the Kraus car, Mrs. Ruth Herrick, 40, also was injured in the collision.

Mrs. Kraus suffered multiple abrasions of the forehead and scalp while Mrs. Herrick received ankle and leg injuries, according to a hospital spokesman. Both women were treated and released.

Mrs. Clara Smith, 85, 808 East 18th, who suffered second and third degree burns over 40 per cent of her body in an accident at her home Monday evening, was moved from the Intensive Care Unit into a hospital room Thursday, a hospital spokesman said. Mrs. Smith was injured when the sleeve of her dress apparently caught fire and the flames spread over the rest of her body. Her condition is still considered serious.

A tribute to secretaries

Past

Phi Beta Lambda, a business and office organization at State Fair Community College, honored SFCC secretaries Wednesday with a tea and style show in observation of the 23rd annual National Secretaries Week, April 21 to 27. Phi Beta Lambda members showed what secretaries wore at the turn of the decades from 1900 to 1970, including a glimpse at the future.

Future?

Miss Ellen Ensminger, left, modeled the tailored look of the 1950's. A secretary in the year 2000 might wear what Mrs. Jenelle Berry modeled, complete with computer, microphone and headsets. Shorthand might even become outdated, it was indicated, but never the boss' need for his good right hand, his secretary. (Democrat-Capital Photos)

Polly's pointers

Shorter showers help cut bills

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — When taking a shower, I no longer turn the water on full blast, only about half as strong as I used to. This helps with the energy crisis and my utility bill has been visibly lower since I started doing this. — I.H.

DEAR POLLY — Since Mrs. W.C. finds toilet bowl cleaners and deodorizers that turn blue objectionable she could use bleach in the bowl. I have used it for years and find it works well. — MRS. A.H.

(POLLY'S NOTE — NEVER use a toilet bowl cleaner with the bleach.)

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I put my wet clothes basket on the mat in front of a door and the dye from the mat soaked into the green-and-white checked tile floor. This left a red-looking stain that I have tried to remove with various household cleaners, full strength ammonia and lighter fluid but to no avail. I did not think the mat would run. There were no warnings or instructions on it when purchased. I do hope someone will have some suggestions as to how I might remove this stain from my slightly-cushioned tile floor of the type that does not require waxing. — SONJA. (NEA)

Patricia Hearst's life is probed

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HILLSBOROUGH, Calif.
(AP) — Are Patricia Hearst's startling words being forced from her?

An Associated Press investigation finds no evidence in her background that the 20-year-old heiress to a newspaper fortune would say or do anything violent — much less join terrorists, mouth radical rhetoric or aid in a bank robbery.

But she has done them as the astounding developments of the country's first political kidnapping unwind. Whether or not her actions have been voluntary, whether she has been brainwashed, coerced, threatened, is not known.

This is the story of Patty Hearst before Feb. 4, when the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army claims it kidnapped her, before her friends and fiancé and parents and some impartial experts say she was brainwashed and coerced into saying she would join her captors.

She was known as a bright, self-confident young woman, independent enough to fly the nest with a boyfriend, but caring enough to keep close ties with her family. She took vacations with them, and saw them often. She was making her wedding guest list and picking a China pattern shortly before kidnapping.

Like many of today's youth, she had lived with her boyfriend, Steven Weed, a philosophy graduate student, for the past year and a half. Their relationship was to become marriage in late June.

She was a thoughtful art student at the University of California at Berkeley, once a hotbed of student radicalism but now stirred only by an occasional streaker. She rarely discussed politics.

Domestic life with Weed was quiet. They spent most of their time at home, watching television reruns of "Star Trek" and "Mission Impossible" during long, candle-lit dinners.

They lived in a $250 Berkeley apartment. Their income was a $300 monthly allowance from her parents and a small salary he received as a teacher's assistant.

Patty was an excellent cook, especially good at souffles, cakes and pies. She and Weed listened to the stereo, he favoring the classics, she the soft rock singers Paul Simon, Carole King and Carly Simon.

They had used marijuana, but wine was their thing. They usually had 20 or 30 bottles on hand and were trying to learn better vintages.

They didn't subscribe to the San Francisco Examiner, of which her father, Randolph A. Hearst, is editor and president, or any other newspaper. Their only magazines were Cosmopolitan, satiric National Lampoon and Sunset, a travel and recreational magazine.

The Hearsts learned of the living arrangement shortly before last Christmas. They had thought their daughter had a female roommate.

"Mr. Hearst was more understanding," said Weed. "Mrs. Hearst is very traditional and Catholic, so she was obviously opposed to it. But she finally said, 'Well, you're going to do it anyway,' so there was no big fuss."

Weed, a Princeton University graduate, is six years older than Miss Hearst, who had her 20th birthday in SLA captivity. He is tall and slender, with a brush mustache. An art professor of Patty's described her as "like something painted in the 15th century . . . long, golden-brown hair and perfectly fair skin."

When they went out, Steven and Patty enjoyed prowling auctions and second-hand shops to find antiques and art works.

Last summer they traveled around California, in his Volkswagen or her blue MG, a gift from her parents. They went to Wynton, a Hearst family retreat in the forests of northern California.

Patty is the granddaughter of the publishing giant, William Randolph Hearst. But she knows little about him except as an important collector of art. She has read no biographies about him nor has she seen "Citizen Kane," the fictional film based in part on his life.

She was born the third of five daughters. Both parents have always been busy with their own lives. Besides directing the Examiner against stiff competition from the San Francisco Chronicle, Hearst served as board chairman of the Hearst Corp. His wife, Catherine, helped found the San Mateo Crippled Children's Society and is a regent of the University of California.

The daughters were supervised by a succession of governesses and maids, some good, some bad. An English governess named Heather proved kindly and sympathetic to the problems of the middle daughter as she sought her place in the family and at school.

Patty followed the family tradition: catechism and confirmation at the parish church, teaching from the nuns at the parochial school. She went away from home for the first time to begin high school at tightly-run Santa Catalina School in Monterey.

After the second year she convinced her father she was unhappy and left the school. A rumor that she was expelled for smoking marijuana is denied by the school and her parents.

She enrolled at the less conservative Crystal Springs School. Life began to flower. She discovered art and literature. She took a class trip to Japan and was deeply impressed.

In the fall of 1971 she entered Menlo College, a liberal arts school near Stanford.

She met Weed at Crystal Springs, where he taught math. She pursued him, Weed said, and he was taken by her slim beauty and eagerness for knowledge. They dated regularly.

In the summer of 1972 Patty toured Italy and Greece with her art class. When she returned, she and Weed rented an apartment.

"Patty grew up fast; she didn't appear like an 18-year-old at Berkeley," said Weed. "Our friends were ones I had known, all in the 25-30 age bracket. She fitted very well into the adult world."

Though the Hearsts were upset at their daughter living with Weed, they were visibly relieved that a wedding was planned for June.

It seemed that their world, which combined quiet, graceful living with civic responsibility, would be well-ordered once more.

Then came the night of Feb. 4.

And from that point on the story of Patty Hearst blurs.

New material on Miss Hearst

A portion of what is said to be Patricia Hearst's driver's license lies atop a poster bearing the symbol of the Symbionese Liberation Army. The poster and the license accompanied a new tape. A voice identified as Miss

Hearst's said she had participated in a recent bank robbery of her own free will and it was "ridiculous" to believe she had been brainwashed or that she was a "sweet little girl." (UPI)

Administration objects to controls continuation

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid predictions that inflation for the remainder of the year may be higher than previously believed, Senate Democrats are trying to breathe new life into the administration's dying wage and price controls program.

But the administration says it doesn't want the authority.

The Democratic action came as John T. Dunlop, the head of the Cost of Living Council, predicted that the rate of inflation for the second half of 1974 may be higher than the 5 or 6 per cent administration economists had forecast. Prices increased at an annual rate of 10.8 per cent in January, February and March.

Issuing the administration's objection to continuation of wage and price controls, Edgar R. Fielder said, "For the economy as a whole, standby authority creates more problems and more inflation than it could ever help prevent." Fielder is assistant secretary of the treasury for economic policy.

William E. Simon, President Nixon's nominee as the new secretary of the treasury, told the Senate Finance Committee Wednesday he opposes any continuation of controls except in the health and construction industries. Simon also came out against any income tax cut for citizens, a move which leading Democrats favor as a means of countering the effects of inflation.

The wage and price controls program will end April 30 unless Congress acts to extend it.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, the Democratic majority leader, said after Wednesday's vote by a Democratic conference that an attempt would be made to add the standby controls legislation to a minor bill already on the Senate calendar. Sources said the move likely would not come before next week.

Senators attending the conference said the Democrats were having second thoughts about the need for controls because of the serious inflation reported last week and the prospect it will continue.

One administration source said the Democrats may fear they will be blamed for continuing inflation since they had earlier rejected the administration's plan for continuing controls on a limited basis.

Even if standby controls are approved by the Senate, the program would face an uphill struggle in the House, which already has voted to kill all controls after April 30.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board Wednesday sent a major signal to the nation's money markets that interest rates will continue high and monetary policy restrictive.

It raised the discount rate on loans to member banks from 7½ to 8 per cent, a record high. At the same time, some major banks around the country increased their prime lending rate — the rate for loans to their best customers — to 10½ per cent, also a record high.

Unclaimed body identified

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — Martha Evans had heard the story about an embalmed body being kept in the second-floor storage room of the Woodward Funeral Home. So when she brought a beautician to do the hair of a deceased friend, she asked to see it.

"Oh, my God, it's Bellhouse," she shrieked.

Bellhouse was the family nickname for her brother-in-law, James Evans, who had been missing for 27 years. He was a migrant worker in the peach and apple orchards and farms along the East Coast.

His wife, Lulia Mae, now of Cranford, N.J., and the rest of the family had searched for him from Florida northward.

But it was Mrs. Evans who found him — embalmed and dressed in a black suit, white shirt, black tie and hat, standing upright under a sheet in the corner of the storage room. She discovered the body in January, but details weren't made public until she granted an interview on Tuesday.

A funeral is planned July 27, long enough away to allow Evans' wife and seven children to make arrangements to be present from New Jersey, Texas and California.

Officials said Evans died near Spartanburg 3½ years ago at the age of 80. But they said no one in the family knew of the death because he had been using the alias William Bryant.

No one claimed the body at the Spartanburg General Hospital and so it was transferred to the funeral home and embalmed. Officials there tried through newspapers and radio stations to find someone to claim it, but got no response.

The executive director of the South Carolina Funeral Directors Association, W.O. Folk, said the funeral home broke no law by allowing the body to remain unburied for so long.

New radioactive waste railroad car 'derailed'

CHICAGO (AP) — How can radioactive waste materials be transported safely from nuclear power plants to reprocessing plants?

That question arose Wednesday when the Santa Fe Railway said it has refused to move a railroad car specially designed to haul radioactive materials until the nuclear power industry establishes some safeguards.

The heavily shielded new car, weighing 70 tons when its 18-foot-long cylinder is filled, has been on a siding in Fort Madison, Iowa, for a month. The empty container was put there while en route from the General Electric Midwest Fuel Recovery Plant in Morris, Ill., to San Onofre, Calif., where it was to pick up a load of burned out nuclear fuel for recycling at Morris.

"Our people are not going to move it unless there are adequate safeguards for handling radioactive fuel," Santa Fe's vice president of operations, Larry Cena, said.

The car was delivered to Fort Madison by another railroad, and Cena said Santa Fe wants to be certain that hauling can be done safely before the car is loaded.

A general Electric spokesman said it owns the car and a twin which is parked at its Morris plant. When the plant opens in mid-summer it will be the first commercial nuclear fuel reprocessing plant in the United States. The plant will recover uranium for use in making new fuel.

Another General Electric executive said the cars were built to AEC and GE specifications at a cost of $3 million and were licensed by the AEC.

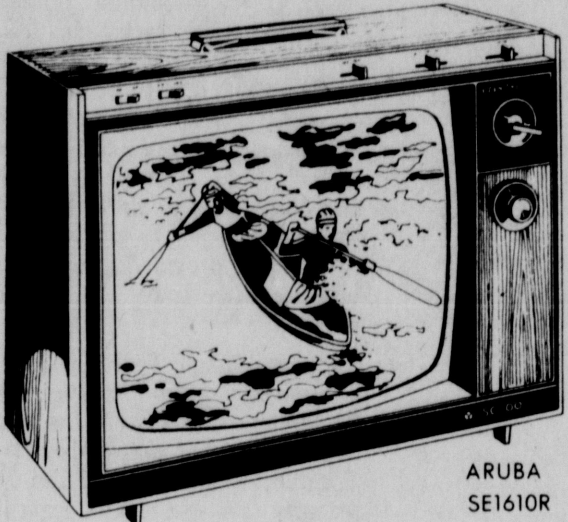

The AEC in Washington said it knew nothing of the side-tracking.

The nuclear power industry estimates that 100 carloads of nuclear waste will be transported by 1975, and as more nuclear power plants open up across the country, 900 carloads may be shipped by 1980.

A spokesman for the Association of American Railroads said his group feels radio active fuel should be hauled in special trains, not with general cargo. The Santa Fe said it wanted to determine if the car should be hauled by itself, with only an engine and caboose or with other cars.

A spokesman at Morris said the consumer will be the one to feel the difference. A special train costs more than $30,000 compared to $6,000 to $7,000 for a regular train.

Major banks raise rate

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 10 major commercial banks, including the world's largest, have raised their prime lending rate to a record 10½ per cent.

Analysts attributed the latest increase in the prime to high rates for short-term loans on which banks rely for their funds.

The prime is the rate banks charge their most credit-worthy corporate customers. It is not tied directly to other bank loan rates but a higher prime can also lead to increases in those rates.

Woman is arrested

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Authorities in southeast Missouri report the arrest Wednesday night of a woman wanted in connection with the death of a Kennett, Mo., resident last October.

Sheriff Clyde Hendricks of Butler County reported the arrest of Mrs. Norma Lee Goins, 44, Broseley, Mo., on charges of murder and conspiracy to commit murder. She and three others have been arrested in connection with the death of Larry Jarrett, 28, whose badly decomposed body was found in a forest preserve in Cook County, Ill., Oct. 4, 1973.

The Missouri Highway Patrol reports Chicago detectives came to southeast Missouri 12 days after the discovery of the body and more recently informed southeast Missouri officers that they presented the case to a grand jury on Monday.

The patrol said the grand jury issued warrants for Norma Goins; her sister-in-law, Geraldine Harmon; Roland Vance and Ralph Watts. The other three are presently in custody in Illinois, the patrol said.

Mrs. Goins is being held at the Butler County jail in Poplar Bluff. The sheriff's office said she was a long-time resident of Butler County.

FACTS

The mystery of why some whales and dolphins suddenly strand themselves on beaches may soon be solved. The Smithsonian Institution has organized a program to alert its scientists whenever a beaching occurs along the Atlantic coast thus allowing immediate studies to be made. The World Almanac notes. One theory is that environmental conditions in the water interfere with the natural sonar navigation system used by these mammals.

Pentagon closets are gold mines

WASHINGTON — It received hardly a mention in the newspapers, but the Pentagon last week just happened to "find" $266 million it didn't know it had.

Buchwald

It seems that the Defense Department had asked for $1.6 billion for aid to South Vietnam, but Congress had voted only $1.2 billion. Instead of the Pentagon getting upset by the cut in funds it announced that it had "found" $266 million which could make up the difference.

How did the Pentagon find the money? It's a very interesting story.

Two weeks ago two cleaning women in the Pentagon were working late at night in the basement of the building. One of the ladies was a new employee and she opened what she thought was a broom closet.

Instead of brooms and mops she saw neatly piled stacks of brand-new $100 bills.

"Henrietta," she said to the lady she was working with, "there ain't no brooms or mops in that closet. How am I supposed to get my work done when all they keep in there is money?"

Henrietta came over and looked in. "Heavens to Betsy, you're right. They expect us to clean the floors, mop the halls and dust the furniture and they don't even give us the tools to do it with. Let's find the supervisor."

They brought the supervisor back. He peered into the closet and became angry. "If I told them once I told them 100 times the only thing I want to see in broom closets is brooms. I'm going to get the duty officer."

The duty officer, a colonel, was asked to come to the basement. When he showed up he couldn't believe his eyes. "How much money do you think there is in that closet?"

"Bout $266 million," Henrietta said. "Now what about our mops?"

The colonel rushed off to call his superior at home. "General, the cleaning women just found $266 million in a broom closet in the basement."

The general was furious. "Why are you bothering me at home at this hour about $266 million? Turn it over to Lost-and-Found."

"Yes, sir," the colonel said.

The next day the Lost-and-Found officer put out notices on all the bulletin boards in the Pentagon which read: "If anyone has lost $266 million in new $100 bills, kindly pick it up as soon as possible at Lost-and-Found. If the money is not claimed within the week, it will be turned over to the South Vietnamese government."

Although there are thousands of people working in the Pentagon, no one admitted to owning the money. This caused some wild speculation. The Army said the Navy had hidden the cash in the broom closet so they could buy an extra submarine when no one was looking. The Navy said the Air Force had stashed it away for the next overrun on a new Lockheed cargo plane.

In any case, no one claimed the cash and it was turned over to six cadets of the South Vietnamese marine corps who were returning to Saigon after a visit to Parris Island.

But the discovery of the money caused a storm at the Pentagon. The secretary of defense, in a very tough memo to all personnel, said, "There will be no more storing of unaccounted funds in broom closets."

"These closets will be used in the future solely for cleaning utensils. If there is one thing I will not stand for as long as I am secretary it's a dirty Pentagon."

A conservative view

Thoughts on right to reply

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Back in 1913 the Florida state legislature adopted a statute that became known, in time, as the Right To Reply Law. It is a fair assumption that the act was adopted during a fit of temper at the newspapers, a condition endemic among politicians since at least the time of Thomas Jefferson.

Kilpatrick

The act says that if a newspaper "assails the personal character" of any candidate for public office, or "attacks his official record," such newspaper, on request, "shall immediately publish free of cost any reply he may make thereto, in as conspicuous a place and in the same kind of type as the matter that calls for such reply, provided such reply does not take up more space than the matter replied to."

Florida's Right To Reply Law languished almost forgotten on the books until September of 1972, when the Miami Herald ran a couple of editorials criticizing Pat Tornillo, a candidate in the Democratic primary for the state legislature. The Herald referred to Tornillo as the "czar" of the Classroom Teachers Association, accused him of "shakedown statesmanship," and said it would be "inexcusable" for the voters to send him to Tallahassee.

Tornillo dusted off the 1913 law, prepared written replies to the two editorials, and demanded they be published. Under these circumstances, with the law invoked, the Herald understandably refused. Tornillo then brought a civil action asking money damages and seeking a court order to compel publication. The trial court found the act unconstitutional — the state attorney general would not even defend it — but the Florida Supreme Court reversed and upheld the law. The Herald appealed and the U.S. Supreme Court on April 17 heard arguments in the case.

Two or three points: Though the Herald did not run the two letters Tornillo submitted, the Herald regularly had published Tornillo's letters in the past. Tornillo made no complaint of unfairness in the news columns. The Herald's sister paper, the evening News, endorsed, Tornillo's candidacy.

So far as I know, virtually every professional association of newsmen and editors is praying that the Supreme Court will reverse and thus restore the trial court's original ruling. If the high court should affirm, we can foresee a rash of Right To Reply Laws across the country. The effect, in our view, would be absolutely to chill editorial criticism of candidates and incumbents. A law that compels a newspaper to publish "any reply" strikes us as a flagrant abridgment of freedom of the press.

There is, of course, an opposing point of view. Among those urging affirmance is Nicholas Johnson, formerly a member of the Federal Communications Commission, now chairman of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting. In a brief filed with the court, the committee argues that the public's "First Amendment interest in an informed electorate" justifies such laws. The people "must be armed with sufficient information about the candidates and the issues to make intelligent, informed choices."

Johnson's group argues that the FCC's "right to reply" regulation has not chilled radio give-and-take. Over the last three years the FCC has imposed only six fines (known as forfeitures) on radio stations for failure to accord air time promptly for replies to personal attacks. Considering the number of complaints, the number of fines is small.

The Tornillo case is the most important of a dozen cases before the Supreme Court having to do with freedom of speech and of the press. If the Florida act is upheld, incumbent officeholders will rejoice. Newspapers eventually may hesitate to attack their "official records" because no editor wants to be compelled to print "any reply" a politician may provide. Rather than be harassed by civil and criminal litigation, busy editors may choose to kill a critical piece before it gets in print.

Will the electorate be better informed? I doubt it. Would nationwide Right To Reply Laws make newspapers fairer? It is conceivable; but it is at least equally possible that such laws might make newspapers less robust instead.

Curtis vs. Eagleton

It looks like Missourians will be faced with a rather sharply-defined choice in next fall's senatorial election, with the announcement by Republican Thomas B. Curtis that he will once again challenge Thomas F. Eagleton, now the incumbent, for his Senate seat.

Curtis, a former 18-year veteran of the U.S. House of Representatives, was only narrowly defeated by Eagleton in the 1968 election. Curtis says this time he will run a more issue-oriented campaign, based largely on Eagleton's record, which he calls too liberal for most Missourians.

As representative from Missouri's Second Congressional District from 1950 to 1968, Curtis established a reputation as a conservative lawmaker. Eagleton, on the other hand, has been identified with the liberal Democratic wing of the Senate, which was instrumental in his being picked by Sen. George McGovern as his running mate in the 1972 presidential campaign.

Then Eagleton was dumped from the Democratic ticket after it was revealed that he had undergone periodic psychiatric treatments for depression. Although the resulting uproar was a major liability to McGovern, it proved to be boon to Eagleton's political fortunes in Missouri, where he became the beneficiary of a sizable sympathy reaction.

This factor is expected to be still strong in Eagleton's campaign this fall, two years after the McGovern debacle. Curtis' attempts to focus Missouri voters' attention to the issues, as he intends, will be watched with interest in what might otherwise be a somewhat dull political year in Missouri.

Courtroom victory

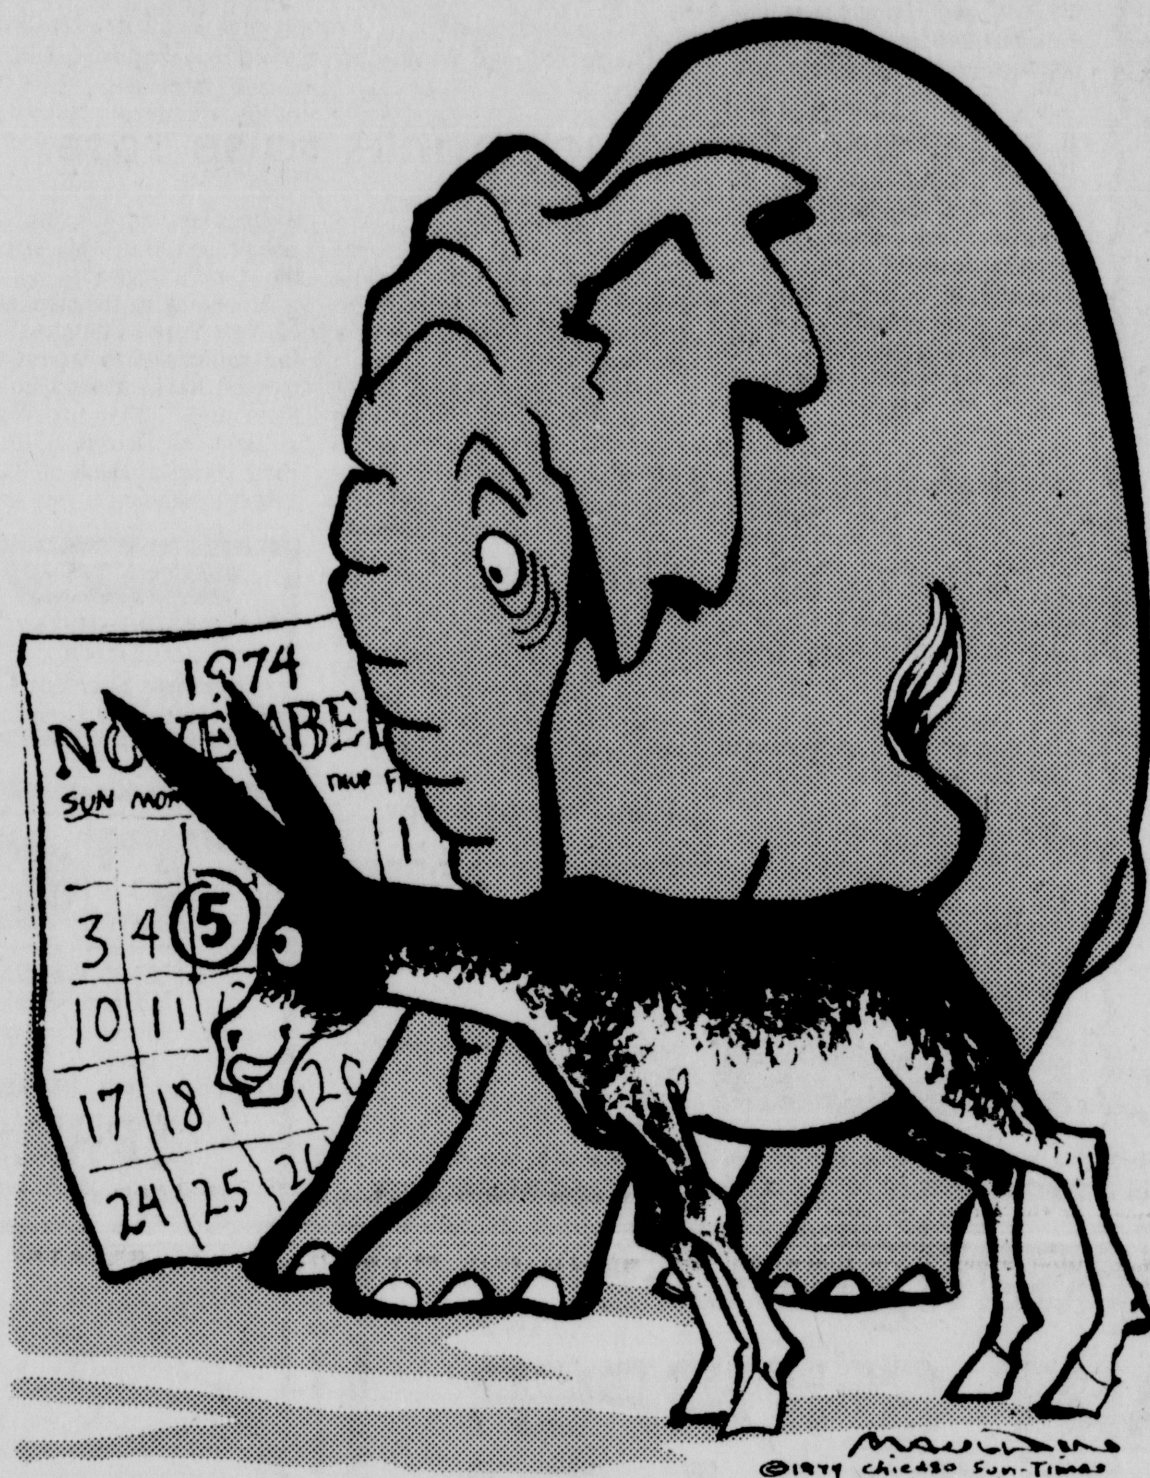

The brutal slaying of 16-year-old Karen Jones last Aug. 13 has apparently been solved with the conviction Tuesday in Columbia of Kim Eugene Phillips for second-degree murder.

The victory for the prosecution no doubt comes as good news to Sedalians, who have been understandably edgy in recent years as murders in this area have become all too frequent.

Still at large is the killer of Barbara Jean Galliher, who was strangled Aug. 15, 1970. The case is still open in the death of Otha Brown, whose body was found Feb. 6 tied to a tree near LaMonte. And so far there have been no arrests in the shooting death of Charles L. Buis, whose body was discovered in a camper here Feb. 24.

Phillips' conviction was achieved by thorough investigative work and aggressive prosecution. We hope the same skills will be applied with equal vigor to the other murder cases in which justice has yet to be done.

Claim favoritism in Rockwell contracts

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Rockwell International, the corporate giant, has demonstrated a strange knack for wangling government favors.

The pattern is described by investigators for Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., in an unpublished staff report. Alleging a "government tilt toward Rockwell," the report makes these explosive accusations:

✓ When the Federal Aviation Administration wanted to modernize its air fleet, then Transportation Secretary John Volpe allegedly served notice that "he would approve the acquisition of the aircraft only on the condition that they come from Rockwell International."

✓ The Coast Guard is also rebuilding its air fleet with Rockwell Sabre liners. Yet "there was no competitive program established by the Coast Guard to guarantee that the best aircraft was selected for the least amount of money," charges the report.

Independent engineers, called in by Murphy to study the program, estimate "a minimum cost overrun of $32 million with a possibility of the overrun reaching $50 million."

✓ When complaints began reaching Congress of government favoritism toward Rockwell, the report alleges, "several companies were warned that punitive action would be taken in the future if they did not 'get the hell off' of this line of approach."

✓ The report cites the findings of a House Civil Service investigation that the Transportation Department was guilty of "cronyism" and "favoritism" in loading its professional staff with employees who had once worked at Rockwell.

✓ In an earlier column, we told how Rockwell unloaded on the taxpayers a lavish, out-of-the-way $20 million building it couldn't use. We reported that the General Services Administration has agreed to take over the unoccupied Laguna Niguel, Calif., building in exchange for more desirable, government-owned property, which the corporation is eager to acquire. GSA boss Arthur Sampson, in rebuttal, called the exchange a "once-in-a-lifetime" bargain.

We spoke to Volpe in Rome, where he is now the U.S. ambassador. The former transportation secretary denied ordering the FAA to do business with Rockwell.

"I am damn sure I never did any such thing," Volpe told us. "My conscience wouldn't allow me to do it." Volpe's former FAA chief, John Shaffer, agreed emphatically that he had never been ordered to buy Rockwell planes. The contract was awarded, nevertheless, without competitive bidding.

FOOTNOTE: The Murphy investigators got their information, one of them told us, from a witness who had heard Volpe issue the Rockwell order. Three other witnesses privy to the arrangement also confirmed it, said the investigator.

DARK DOINGS: The energy crisis has made one thing perfectly clear: bureaucrats don't trust each other to turn off lights. Ever since the government acknowledged there is an energy shortage, the General Services Administration has been sending crews around to federal buildings to remove excess light bulbs.

The experts prowled through offices and corridors with their light meters. When they find someone enjoying an extra lumen or two, they hustle in with their ladders and start yanking bulbs.

The great bulb raid, however, has created a storage problem. The GSA has accumulated 12 million fluorescent lamps and hasn't the room to keep them.

The federal raiders, therefore, have devised a grading system: the "bad" ones (though they were burning brightly when removed) are discarded; the "intermediate" ones are either donated to state agencies or put up for sale at government surplus stores; the "good" ones are stacked in warehouses.

LUCKY LUCKMAN: A mysterious, handwritten note, initialed by embattled Veterans Administrator Donald Johnson, directs that all the Veterans Administration's architectural contracts in California should be awarded to a Los Angeles engineering firm.

We have obtained a copy of the terse, handwritten order, which declares: "All A-E work in California (except Loma Linda) until further notice is to Luckman & Associates." The document is dated 12-17-71.

The instructions, according to our investigation, were not obeyed. At least six other contract awards have gone to firms other than Luckman since the memo was written. But Luckman landed by far the largest VA contracts in California, totalling just under $3 million.

Through a VA spokesman, Johnson said he had no specific recollection of the memo but did not deny its existence. Still, any charge of favoritism, he declared, was "untrue."

Jim Luckman, commenting on behalf of the firm, said it had been awarded the big-money contracts because of previous "efficient and economical" work for the VA. Of the Johnson memo, Luckman said wryly: "I wish it were true."

Informed sources suggest that Johnson, an intensely partisan Nixon man, may have been influenced by the political support the firm's head, Charles Luckman, has given to President Nixon. Luckman, the former boy wonder of the Lever Brothers soap empire, contributed $13,000 to the 1972 Nixon campaign.

Ann Landers

Article relieves wives' frustration

Dear Ann: I found an article which was cut out of the newspaper. It was so good I thought that it must have come out of your column. Please print it and help millions of frustrated housewives get through the day. Thank you. — E. P.

Just for today, I will live through the next 12 hours and not tackle my whole life's problems at once.

Just for today, I will improve my mind. I will learn something useful. I will read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

Just for today, I will be agreeable. I will look my best, speak in a well-modulated voice, be courteous and considerate.

Just for today, I will not find fault with friend, relative or colleague. I will not try to change or improve anyone but myself.

Just for today, I will have a program. I might not follow it exactly, but I will have it. I will save myself from two enemies, hurry and indecision.

Just for today, I will exercise my character in three ways. I will do a good turn and keep it a secret. If anyone finds out, it won't count.

Just for today, I will do two things I don't want to do, just for exercise.

Just for today, I will be unafraid. Especially will I be unafraid to enjoy what is beautiful and believe that as I give to the world, the world will give to me.

Dear E.P.: Yes, it did appear in my column, and I thank you for asking me to reprint it.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently a Salt Lake City mother wrote to you and said she was disgusted with the middle-aged women who had written to complain about the ugly stretch marks on their bodies, how they interfered with their ability to wear bikinis, and other such nonsense. She suggested that instead of hating stretch marks she should think of them as "medals" because they usually result from childbirth.

I am 15 years old and mine aren't from childbirth. They are from losing weight. I don't want my medals ahead of time. Please tell me how to get rid of my stretch marks NOW. I'm too embarrassed to see a doctor. Yes, I wear a bra. — Marred.

Dear Mar: Time will be your best ally. The stretch marks will become less visible in a few years. Unless you are planning a career as a stripper, I don't see how the marks will hinder you in any way.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter's in-laws moved to town about six months ago. We are simple people of modest means and are satisfied with our lives. We envy no one.

The in-laws seem to be invited to our daughter's home every time we are invited and it is creating a problem. My husband cannot stand them. They are non-stop talkers and shameless braggarts. They go on endlessly about their trips, their recent purchases, their this, their that — everything always the finest, complete with price tags. Their other grandchildren are, of course, the most brilliant and beautiful in the world, and they always have about two dozen snapshots to pass around.

Will you please tell me, Ann Landers, what we can do about this? Our son-in-law is a very fine chap and we must not let anything come between us. — Tone Deaf.

Dear T.D.: Ask your daughter to invite you separately. If it's as bad as you say, I'm sure she will understand.

Got those wedding bell blues over costs... guest list... what to wear... and other details? Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" will help. For a copy, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (20 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654. c. 1974 Field Enterprise, Inc.

Blasts Nixon

John Kenneth Galbraith, Harvard University economics professor and critic of the Nixon economic policies, said Tuesday "we will not have a stopped inflation until we have a government that is determined to stop it." At a news conference here before a speaking engagement, Galbraith said President Nixon is more concerned with his own survival than with curtailing inflation. "The present administration has no economic policy," Galbraith said. (UPI) people would like to solve their problem with just one prune a day — any time of the day.

Seriously, the time isn't all that important. More important for your purpose is to develop a habit. For this purpose, I would suggest going to the bathroom whether you need to or not each morning just after a good breakfast containing at least two glasses of something liquid.

Don't worry if you don't have a bowel movement the first day, or the second, or later at that time of day. If you follow this routine, soon you will start having them at that time of day.

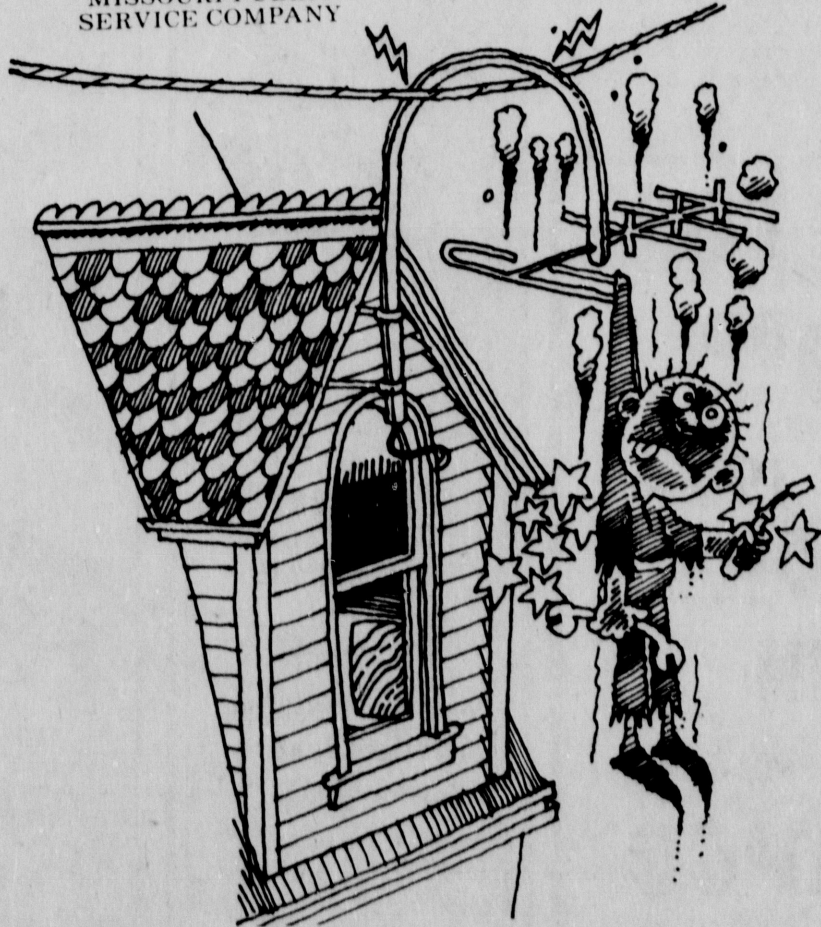

A lot of people tend to get up, wash, have a fast cup of coffee and a roll or piece of toast then dash to the office. In this way they miss the opportunity to develop good habits. Nature provides a strong bowel reflex normally about 15 to 30 minutes after an adequate breakfast. (NEA)

MISSOURI PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY

Missourians now grow more products. Feed more people. And support better legislation.

THANKS TO MFA

When 152,000 Missouri farmers get together, things happen:

...like 6 new high-yielding corn varieties in the last four years.

...ownership positions in plant food manufacturing from Canada to Florida.

...leasing rail cars to move grain and fertilizer faster.

...construction of over $5,000,000 of new storage facilities... and shared ownership of suppliers having $300,000,000 of new construction under contract.

In the legislature, MFA presses for better education. Improved roads. And economic reforms such as the strategic commodity reserve program.

Yes, for all Missourians — MFA works for more markets, better income and improved food production.

Come grow with us and make things happen cooperatively.

Three are arrested in MU burglaries

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Police said three St. Louis County youths have been charged with burglarizing fraternity houses at the University of Missouri at Columbia.

Charged Wednesday as suspects in 29 burglaries at the university were Charles Alper, 19, University City; Todd Varnberg, 18, Chesterfield, and George Maserang, 18, Creve Couer.

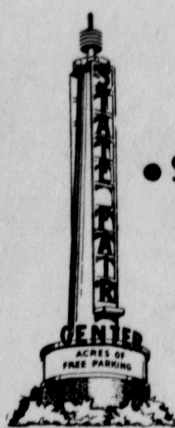

Police said the three were among 19 persons recently arrested in connection with break-ins of several west St. Louis County homes and two schools.

Giacomin, Rangers still upset over disputed goal

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Rangers still swear they got the short end of the stick and that, although they're on the short end of the series, their playoff against Philadelphia is far from over.

The rough-and-tumble Flyers lead the National Hockey League's best-of-seven semifinal round 2-0 going into tonight's game at Madison Square Garden.

"I swear that puck did not go over the line," said Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin of Ed Van Impe's second-period shot Monday night. The puck deflected off Ranger defenseman Rod Seiling and bounced over the New York goalie who whirled around and grabbed the puck as it headed into the net.

Giacomin claimed the puck never reached the net, but referee Dave Newell upheld the goal judge and Philadelphia swept to a 5-2 victory.

The victory was the Flyers' sixth straight playoff victory, a streak they now risk in Madison Square Garden where they have never beaten a team coached by Emile Francis. Under Francis, the Rangers have won 10 and tied six against the Flyers in New York.

New York has the home ice advantage for the next two games. The series will return to Philadelphia for Game 5, if necessary.

Despite the loss, the Rangers showed improvement Monday over their opening game against Philadelphia when they were thoroughly outplayed.

New York could look even better if their captain, Vic Hadfield, is able to come back from a severely sprained left ankle which has sidelined him since the third playoff game against Montreal.

Boston faces key game tonight against Hawks

CHICAGO (AP) — The trailing Boston Bruins skate perhaps the pivotal game of their Stanley Cup National Hockey League semifinal playoffs against the surging Chicago Black Hawks tonight.

The Hawks moved into a 2-1 series edge Tuesday night with a dramatic 4-3 sudden-death overtime triumph at the Chicago Stadium.

"This is the big one tonight," said Bruin Coach Bep Guidolin. "But we think we can win it. Then it becomes a best two-out-of-three series and we play two of those games in Boston."

Even the Black Hawks cautiously appraised their chances of sweeping to a commanding 3-1 advantage in the best-of-7 playoff series, a springboard into the Cup championship round against the winner of the Philadelphia Flyer-New York Ranger semifinal round.

"I know we're ahead, but a series between these two teams figures to go all the way," said Hawk veteran Stan Mikita, the game-breaker in Chicago's come-from-behind victory Tuesday night.

As the Hawks trailed 3-1 in the third period, Mikita banged in one goal at 11:38 and then, Chicago Stadium.

Celtics oust N.Y. in 5 games

BOSTON (AP) — The road back has been a long haul since Bill Russell retired as player-coach and a dynasty crumbled in 1969, but the Boston Celtics are ready once again to challenge for the National Basketball Association championship.

The Celtics advanced to the NBA playoff final for the first time since they won the title five years ago by defeating the New York Knicks 105-94 Wednesday night, taking the best-of-7 Eastern Conference series 4-1.

Now they move into a showdown with the mighty Milwaukee Bucks, led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. The first two games in the best-of-7 series will be played in Milwaukee Sunday afternoon and Tuesday night. Games

No. 3 and 4 are scheduled for Boston May 3 and 5.

"It means a lot to beat the Knicks, but it is just another step along the way," Boston captain John Havlicek said. "Against the Bucks we're going to have to be on the run constantly. They like to set up their plays. As for Jabbar, maybe we'll have to let him get his points and try to shut off the others from scoring."

Havlicek, who played on six NBA championships in Boston during the heyday 1960s, was at his best against the Knicks. The Celtics thus avenged their elimination in the same playoff series last year when their team leader was injured. Hondo scored 33 points in the windup, averaging about 30 in the five games.

Tommy Heinsohn, who helped build the Boston dynasty as a player, is leading the Celtics as coach into the NBA finals for the first time.

The Knicks threatened to extend the series with Boston, taking a 52-45 halftime lead. However, the Celtics shook off foul trouble with a third-period spurt, capped by two three-point plays by big Dave Cowens for an 80-79 advantage.

Then Havlicek and Cowens took complete charge in the fourth period and the Celtics exploded for an easy triumph.

Reid's first start profitable

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Willie Reid drew his first starting pitching assignment of the year here Wednesday afternoon and made it a profitable one for himself and the State Fair Community College Roadrunners, as SFCC posted a 5-1 win over Johnson County, Kan., Community College.

Reid, who can normally be found on the receiving end of the pitches (behind the plate), stepped out of his gear in coach Foster McGuire's shuffled lineup.

Third baseman Charles Johnson caught his first game of the year. Terry Neal played third, pitcher Tom Nivens was in right and utility man Duane Thomas played left.

The changes worked out well as the Roadrunners posted the victory.

State Fair jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a rbi double by Johnson and an run-scoring single by Charles Shell.

The balance of the runs scored in the second on a hit by Neal that drove in Thomas and Reid. Keith White's single scored Neal.

Reid was touched for only two hits in recording his first victory of the year.

The loss was tagged onto Al Baldenston.

State Fair was scheduled to meet Linn Tech Thursday afternoon in a twinbill at Liberty Park Stadium.

He will next report to Camp Lejeune, N.C., for combat engineer school and heavy equipment operator training.

Business news

OTTERVILLE — As the result of a survey and drawing contest here, it was learned that 86 per cent of those residents participating favored changing the Citizen's Bank of Otterville name to The Bank of Otterville, according to Steve Bond, chief executive officer of the bank.

The drawing contest was won by Ruth Beck, who received a $50 series E Savings Bond. At the meeting of the bank's board of directors, Elmer Fowler was named to the board.
